I. OPEN DISASTERS/EMERGENCIES:

II. WEATHER:

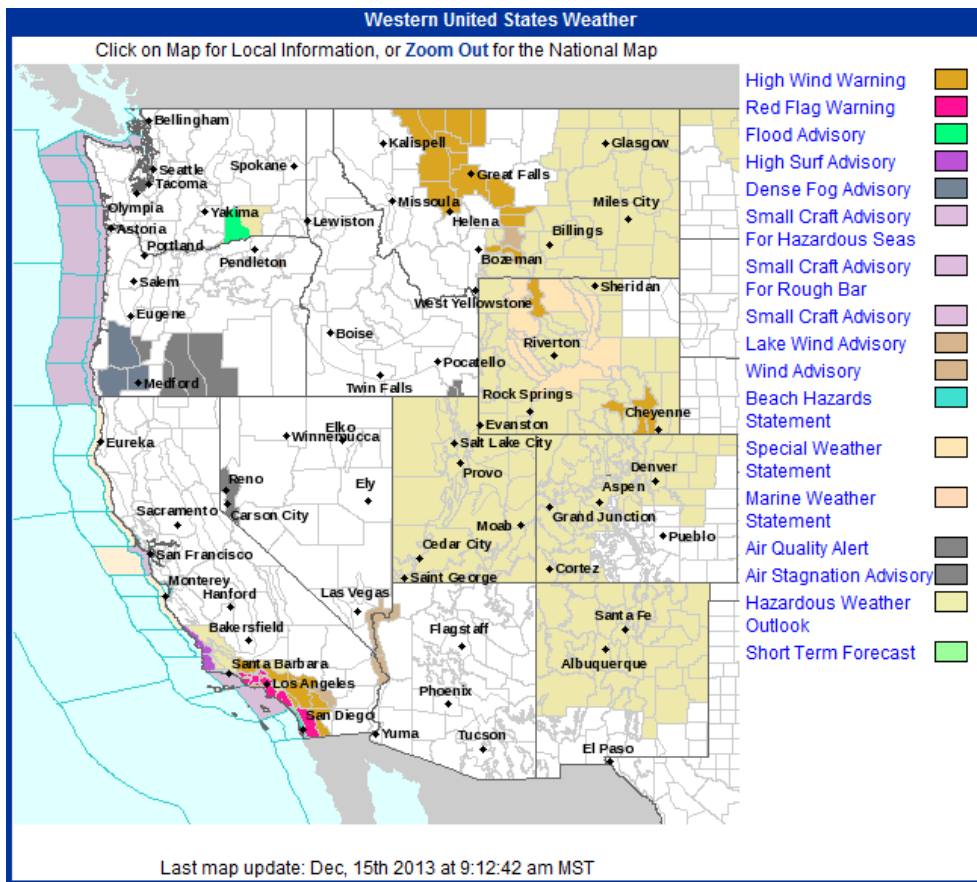

Santa Ana Wind Event

Cold surface high pressure over the Great Basin will force moderate to strong Santa Ana winds through and below passes and canyons of portions of Southern California through Sunday. These winds combined with low relative humidity, dry fuels, and warmer days will increase the potential for rapid fire growth and extreme fire danger this weekend in portions of Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, San Diego, and Ventura Counties. The winds will weaken a bit late Sunday and into Monday; however, it will remain locally breezy, warm, and very dry.

NWS Santa Ana Wind Event Threat Matrix

Weather Hazard	Friday	Saturday	Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
Impact Table		Minimal	Low	Moderate	High
Wind	Light onshore flow	Moderate to Strong Santa Ana flow	Moderate to Strong Santa Ana flow	Weak offshore locally moderate	Light wind	Onshore flow
Humidity	Low	Very low	Very low	Low	Low	Recovering
Scale for IMPACT		Elevated Fire Danger Brush Fires Travel in passes	Elevated Fire Danger Brush Fires Travel in Passes
Confidence	High	High	Moderate	Moderate	Moderate	Moderate

State Weather Map

III. FIRES:

Overall Fire Risk:

Northern California

With mostly dry weather expected a gradual drying trend among dead and dormant fuels can be expected. Lower elevations, especially in the southern end of the region, are still the most vulnerable to wildfire occurrence when any N-NE/Offshore winds develop. Over the next 7 days there will be periods of at least light N-NE/Offshore winds so these conditions will be watched closely.

Southern California

Low Relative Humidity (RH) and warming temperatures will likely result in an increase in Initial Attack (IA) this weekend. Fuels will be highly receptive to ignition over areas which haven't seen any meaningful grass crop growth, especially across Ventura, Los Angeles and Orange Counties. In these areas, rains have been light and sporadic so far this season which has kept most fuels in a state of dormancy. Expect rapid rates of spread and unseasonably good consumption in any fire which develops in the windy areas. Large fire potential will be elevated in these areas, with less large fire potential further south toward San Diego County where some seasonal rains have occurred. IA and large fire potential will drop by the middle of next week as cooler and more humid weather returns.
